Their Majeſties from thence proceeded to viſit the Chapel at New College, the Colleges of Wadham, Trinity, Lincoln and Brazenoſe. Their Majeſties with the Princeſſes then viſited Chriſt-Church College, and returned to Nuneham the ſame Evening, at about Half an Hour after Six o'Clock.

Their Majeſties and the Princeſſes ſet out again from Nuneham between Nine and Ten o'Clock on Monday Morning, and arrived at Blenheim between Eleven and Twelve, having been met and attended thither by the Inhabitants of Woodſtock. [The Addreſs from the Univerſity of Oxford.]

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

WE, your Majeſty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Chancellor, Maſters and Scholars of the Univerſity of Oxford, deeply impreſſed by this repeated Inſtance of your Majeſty's gracious Condeſcenſion and Goodneſs, beg Leave to ſignify, in the ſtrongeſt Manner, the increaſed Satisfaction we receive from the Royal Preſence among us after the happy Deliverance, which it has pleaſed the Divine Providence to grant your Majeſty, from the late alarming and horrid Attempt to deprive theſe Kingdoms of that invaluable Life to which we owe the ineſtimable Bleſſings of Protection and Security, the genuine Effects of a mild and equal Government.

With ſimilar Sentiments of Pleaſure and Satisfaction we behold the moſt exalted and moſt amiable of her Sex relieved from thoſe Senſations of anxious Solicitude which nothing could effectually remove, but the Reflection that the Attempt, however deſperate, was not the deliberate Act of Malice or Diſaffection, but the wild Effort of a diſordered Mind.

We ſhall not fail, with our Thanks, to offer up our ſincereſt Prayers to that Being, in whom alone are the Iſſues of Life, for the continued Safety and Proſperity of your Majeſty, and your Illuſtrious Houſe; on which the Welfare of the Nation at large, and of this Seat of Religion and Learning in particular, moſt eſſentially depends.

Given at our Houſe of Convocation this Twelfth Day of Auguſt, in the Year of our Lord, 1786.

His Majeſty's Moſt Gracious Anſwer.

SUCH dutiful Sentiments, on My ſecond Viſit to this Seat of Learning, accompanied by affectionate Congratulations on the Protection of Divine Providence, manifeſted by the Failure of the Attempt on My Life, call forth My warmeſt Thanks. I am not leſs ſenſible of your Expreſſions towards the Queen.

The Univerſity of Oxford may ever depend on My Inclination to encourage every Branch of Science, as the more My Subjects are enlightened, the more they muſt be attached to the excellent Conſtitution eſtabliſhed in this Realm.

[The Addreſs from the Corporation of Oxford.]

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

WE, your Majeſty's dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Mayor, Bailiffs and Commonalty of the City of Oxford, in Common-Council aſſembled, influenced by the pureſt Motives of Gratitude for every Bleſſing we could hope or wiſh for under your Majeſty's mild and auſpicious Reign, with the moſt heartfelt Satisfaction congratulate your Majeſty on your late providential Eſcape from the Hands of an Aſſaſſin. An Attempt ſo outrageous and daring upon a Life ſacred and ineſtimable in the Eyes of all Mankind, could only be conceived by one, whom Nature or Infirmity had rendered incapable of knowing your Majeſty's Virtues; and it is Matter of high Conſolation to us, as well as it muſt have been to your Royal Breaſt, to hear that it came from a Perſon of that unhappy Deſcription.

Deeply concerned as we are for your Majeſty's Welfare, we cannot reſiſt the Impulſe of our Feelings in beſeeching your Majeſty, that the moſt effectual Means may be taken to prevent in future ſo diſaſtrous a Calamity a Calamity from again threatening your Majeſty's Subjects; and not only in Words, but with Hearts filled with Veneration and Reſpect for your Sacred Perſon, we moſt devoutly pray the Almighty to continue His Protection to the beſt of Kings.

Given under the Common Seal of our Corporation, this Twelfth Day of Auguſt, 1786.

Such has been the Tenor of your Majeſty's Conduct during the many Years you have reigned over a happy and grateful People, that none but a Perſon deſtitute of Reaſon could form ſo daring and deteſtable a Deſign; a Deſign which has juſtly excited the higheſt Indignation in every Breaſt, except that only which was the Object of the intended Miſchief.

Anxious for your Majeſty's Safety, on which the Welfare of your Subjects ſo eſſentially depends, we beg Leave to aſſure your Majeſty of our beſt Endeavours to ſupport and defend your Perſon and Government, and of our ardent Wiſhes that your Majeſty may long continue to enjoy the Bleſſings of the Divine Favour and Protection.

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

WE, your dutiful Subjects and Servants, the Right Reverend the Dean, the Sub-Dean, Prieſts, Organiſts and Compoſers, the Gentlemen, Serjeant, and Yeoman, of your Royal Chapels, affected with a deep Senſe of the Danger to which your Sacred Perſon was lately expoſed, by a moſt horrid Attempt upon your Life, and which at once threatened an inconſolable Loſs to your Illuſtrious Family, and Deſtruction to the Peace and Welfare of your People at large, humbly beg Leave, in our reſpective Situations, with Sentiments full of Joy and Gratitude to Heaven, to congratulate your Majeſty upon your happy Deliverance from a Misfortune which muſt have been productive of every Evil.

That your Majeſty may live long to reign in the Hearts of all your Subjects, and continue to ſhine forth a bright Example of Paternal Goodneſs to this Nation, both in Church and State, is the unfeigned Prayer of your Majeſty's dutiful Subjects and Servants.

Eſcape did not inſtantly ariſe in the ſame diffuſive Proportion: And, whilſt we contemplate with Gratitude the Care of Heaven in your happy Preſervation, our Admiration is excited at the conſummate Fortitude and Compoſure of your Royal Mind, and that tender Humanity, which could, at ſuch a Moment, exert itſelf toward the miſerable Author of ſo diſtreſſing an Alarm.

May your Majeſty long live in the full Enjoyment of the dutiful Obedience of your Subjects, and of the Love and Affection of your Royal Conſort and Progeny; and late, very late, may your Majeſty be ſucceeded by your well-beloved Son, and Inheritor, they doubt not, of your Majeſty's many Princely Virtues.

In reflecting, with Conſternation and Horror, on this atrocious Attempt, and the dreadful Conſequences which muſt have enſued if the frantic Arm that aimed the Blow had not been rendered impotent, we cannot but reflect at the ſame Time on a Circumſtance which affords us an additional Cauſe of Congratulation, as the Event has occaſioned your Majeſty to experience one of the greateſt of all Satisfactions that can ariſe in the Breaſt of a good Prince; for if ever a general Addreſs was preſented by a People to the Throne of a Sovereign, dictated by the ſole Motive of affectionate and undiſſembled Gratulation, it is that which your Majeſty is at this Juncture receiving from the unanimous Voice of the whole Nation. That your Majeſty may long, very long, continue thus to reign in their Hearts, is the ardent Prayer, may it pleaſe your Majeſty, of your Majeſty's loyal Subjects in this your Borough and Town of Marlborough.

Caſſel, Auguſt 8.

The King of Great Britain, Sovereign of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter, having been pleaſed to appoint the Lord Viſcount Dalrymple, His Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Miniſter Plenipotentiary to the Court of Berlin, and Sir Iſaac Heard, Knight, Garter Principal King of Arms, Plenipotentiaries for inveſting His Serene Highneſs the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel with the Habit and Enſigns of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter, they met here the Fifth Inſtant. The next Morning they had an Audience of the Landgrave, in his Palace at Weiſſenſtein, where they preſented their Credentials and the Book of the Statutes; and His Serene Highneſs declaring his Acceptance of the Order, under the uſual Reſervations as a Prince of the Empire, the Plenipotentiaries immediately inveſted him with the Garter, Ribbon and George, Garter King of Arms pronouncing the uſual Admonition in Latin, and afterwards delivered the Stars and Ribbon.

Monday the 7th Inſtant being appointed by His Serene Highneſs for the public Inveſtiture, the Plenipotentiaries were conducted to the Palace of Caſſel, with the accuſtomed Ceremonies, by Baron de Wittorff, Miniſter of State and Grand Chamberlain, in one of His Serene Highneſs's Coaches, and paſſed through the Audience Chamber to the Gallery, where the Enſigns were laid upon a Table. Soon after His Serene Highneſs came in, and the Plenipotentiaries taking off his Ribbon with the George, and his Coat, they put on the Surcoat and Sword of the Order, Garter taking His Highneſs's Sword, as his Fee, and wearing it, according to Cuſtom, during the Reſt of the Ceremony.

The Habit and Enſigns were then delivered to the Perſons appointed to carry them, and a Proceſſion was made to the Audience Chamber, where two States were placed, one for the Sovereign, and the other on the Left for the Landgrave, with a Chair on either Side for the two Plenipotentiaries, and a Table near the Sovereign's State to lay the Habit and Enſigns upon.

The Order of the Proceſſion was as follows:

The Book of Statutes, on a Velvet Cuſhion, borne by the Chamberlain de Wintzingeroda.

The Cap and Feather, on a Velvet Cuſhion, borne by the Chamberlain de Stockhauſen.

The Collar and George, on n Velvet Cuſhion, borne by the Lord Viſcount Barnard, Son and Heir Apparent of Henry Earl of Darlington.

Francis Townſend, Eſq; Windſor Herald, in His Majeſty's Coat of Arms, bearing the Commiſſion on a Velvet Cuſhion.

Sir Iſaac Heard, Knight, Garter Principal King of Arms, One of the Plenipotentiaries, in his Mantle of the Order.

The Lord Viſcount Dalrymple, firſt Plenipotentiary.

His Sereue Highneſs the Landgrave, ſupported by Baron de Wittorff, Miniſter of State and Grand Chamberlain, and Baron de Boynebourg, Grand Marſhal of the Court.

Coming into the Audience Chamber, the Proceſſion advanced, with Three Reverences, to the Sovereign's State, and the Enſigns were laid upon the Table, the Landgrave and Plenipotentiaries taking their Seats, and all others going to their reſpective Stations. After a ſhort Pauſe, the firſt Plenipotentiary roſe up, and addreſſed His Highneſs in a Latin Oration, which was anſwered, by the Landgrave's Command, by Monſieur de Burgel, Miniſter of State, Preſident of the Court of Appeals, and of the Chamber of Finance; all Perſons ſtanding.

Then Garter delivering the Commiſſion to the firſt Plenipotentiary, he preſented it to the Landgrave, who gave it to Monſieur de Burgel to read; which having done, he returned it to His Serene Highneſs, who delivered it to Garter.

After a Pauſe, Garter, with the uſual Reverences, ſummoned His Serene Highneſs from his Chair of State, and the firſt Plenipotentiary advancing, His Serene Highneſs having been inveſted with the Mantle of the Order, Garter pronounced the Admonition. The Hood alſo having been put on, they inveſted him with the Collar, Garter pronouncing the Admonition. They then preſented the Book of the Statutes to His Serene Highneſs, who delivered to the Plenipotentiaries a Certificate of his Reception of the Order, and Nomination of a Proxy.

Laſtly they placed the Cap and Feather upon His Serene Highneſs's Head, who, making a Reverence to the Sovereign's State, ſat down in his own, and the Plenipotentiaries in their Places.

His Serene Highneſs was then congratulated by the Plenipotentiaries, the Great Officers of State, and all preſent; and the Proceſſion returned in the ſame Order as it came, His Highneſs's Train borne by Two Gentlemen of the Chamber, Monſieur de Gilſe, and Monſieur de Hanſtein.

A ſplendid Banquet was prepared in the Great Hall, where the Plenipotentiaries ſat on either Side the Landgrave. At the Entrance of the Second Courſe, Garter proclaimed the Sovereign's Stile, and then the Landgrave's. His Serene Highneſs drank the Health of the Sovereign, the Queen and Royal Family, and the Knights Companions of the Order. The Plenipotentiaries then drank the Health of the Landgrave, and Proſperity to the Illuſtrious Houſe of Heſſe-Caſſel. There was a Second Table in a Hall adjoining, where martial Muſic played at each Health, and at Intervals during the Dinner.

In the Evening, the Court aſſembled again, and His Serene Highneſs received the Compliments of the Ladies; after which there was a Supper.
